PEACE, NATURE, COOPERATION IN THE BALTIC AND ARCTIC REGIONS

DECLARATION from the International Conference in St. Petersburg, Russia September 21– 22, 2024

To mark the United Nations International Day of Peace, approximately 100 participants from Russia, European countries, the United States and Canada met in Saint Petersburg off- and online to discuss the current situation of the militarization of the Baltic and Arctic regions, the increasing risks of global military confrontation and the links to the worsening climate and other environmental crises.

The participants called for an immediate halt to the escalation of the war in Ukraine and urge the Western Powers to stop weapons deliveries to Ukraine as well as all parties sincerely to work for a permanent peaceful solution of the conflict.

Furthermore, the participants call for the following:

- Instead of the militarized concept of security, put emphasis on human and common security, prioritize peace, climate cooperation, environmental sustainability, equitable resource distribution as well as social, health and education security. Also prioritize United Nations initiatives, resolutions and treaties.
- Move the money from the military to urgent human and environmental needs.
- Russia must be included in all future Helsinki Commission (HELCOM) meetings to address the gravity of the environmental situation in the Baltic Sea. We call for joint large scale clean-up operations.
- The work of the Arctic Council must be restored and include Russia's full participation. Furthermore, cooperation between Indigenous people across the Arctic borders should be encouraged.
- The elimination of the nuclear threat and that the Arctic and Baltic states sign and ratify the Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons (TPNW); as a first step removal of nuclear weapons from high-alert status, extension of warning times and adoption of a policy of no first use of nuclear weapons; enhanced preparedness for potential radioactive emissions from nuclear-powered vessels in Arctic and Baltic waters and the exclusion of all military activities around civil nuclear facilities as well as establishing safety zones around them.
- The Arctic and Baltic regions should be made into nuclear-weapons-free and demilitarized zones of peace.
- Open borders, facilitation of interstate exchanges and restoring people-to people programs.
- Cultivation of a culture of peace. Implementing the UNESCO mandate to build peace through international cooperation within the fields of education, science, culture and communication which is vital to counter the present world tension and militarization. It is necessary to encourage renewed contact and cooperation with UNESCO and see the vision and program of a culture of peace as an important, comprehensive, humanistic framework for our common efforts to learn to live together peacefully.

Finally, the participants call for the restitution of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE)'s inclusive mandate as a necessary framework for peace in Europe and the world.

We call for an OSCE Summit in 2025 to mark its 50th anniversary - in the spirit of the Helsinki Summit in 1975 – to include Russia and a broad spectrum of civil society.

We believe in the indivisibility of security, which means that no one is secure until everyone is secure. Peace is achieved by diplomacy, cooperation and open borders.

Signed by over 100 individual participants in the conference, members of Peace- and Environmental Organisations and other persons supporting the statement – see next three pages –
